text after manuel arturo abreu's MY FRIEND'S FUNERAL

MY FRIEND'S FUNERAL

I put on a white button-up shirt, I tuck it into the black trousers, and put on the jacket. I go to my dad's room across the apartment and ask him for a tie. He gives me a tie. I go back to my room. I put it on. I put the tight dress shoes on. My feet feel like hairless cats smushed into a glass cube in them. I go to my dad and ask him how I look. He asks if I have an undershirt on. I say no. He says I need one. I say it's winter, I won't need an undershirt for sweating. He says it's just proper form. I say are you serious. He says yes. I say come on. He says just put it on. He gives me an undershirt. I go to my room. I take off the jacket. I take off the tie. I unbutton my pants. I untuck my shirt. I unbutton my shirt. I take it off. I put on the undershirt. I tuck it into my unbuttoned pants. Broad strokes, I think. I put the shirt on. I button it. I tuck it in. I button my pants and smooth out my midriff. I button the collar button. I choke a little. There is spit on my left hand. I put on the tie. I put on the jacket. I take a picture of myself on my laptop. My dad comes into my room and says we have to go. He's wearing a Hawaiian shirt, jeans, and sneakers. We drive to the church, which is 12 blocks away. A bag floats into a bare tree, gets hooked on a branch like love. We go into the church. The walls and roof are literally lime green. The church is full. My dad sits near the front. I sit in the back pew with Sam. The pastor or father or whatever walks around with something that emits smoke. It seems baroquely futuristic. He asks Jesus to forgive Don's sin repeatedly. His grave sin. Sam says this is bullshit. A fat man next to us looks at him. He is a cook at the high school we went to. He makes egg and cheese sandwiches for $5.

Instructions for performers

For all musicians

Time: there can be two types of pauses between measures.

Fermatas should last between 1 and 3 seconds (conductor decides exact duration)

Commas should last between 0.5 and 1 second (conductor decides)

When these symbols appear over the barline, the orchestra should pause between measures. When this is happened, there should be silence. These symbols can appear inside of the measure as well, in which case there can be sustained silence, or a sustained (but almost always fading and decaying) tone.

In the second movement, whatever sounds have not ended before the end of the last beat are sustained briefly (while getting softer), before pausing and moving on to the next measure. In the last movement, there is often both a sustained last note and a pause between measures, like in the second movement.

Voices: The conductor and orchestra musicians will, as best they can, all speak and whisper throughout this piece (in addition to their normal roles). In the first movement, the “vocal part” looks like:

In this movement, performers whisper, that is to say, vocalize (move mouth and tongue randomly) without vocal chords (stemmebånd) for the duration of the sustained note. This can be done while breathing in or out. Dynamics as well as accents are written into the score as well. All musicians who are able, and are not playing things which prevent them from whispering, are asked to whisper.

In the second movement, the orchestra, lead by the conductor, will speak the written words in a specific rhythm- rests should be observed closely.

Most words are spoken normally. If there is an * after the words (or no vowel in the word), then the word is whispered. And so, “ssh*, kahhh*, ooo*” is whispered without the vocal chords.

Non-Vocal instructions-

In the second movement, the orchestra will also be instructed to clap (square note-head). The rhythms are notated, and this will appear with the other verbal and non-verbal instructions, on the Voice staff, included in every part for movement II.

“Extended” Instrumental Techniques or other Specific Issues

Winds and brass:

Winds and brass will blow air throughout the piece without a full embouchure. Air should begin with the mouth shaped as if saying the word indicated in the text above the note. This word should not be vocalized, only used as instruction for the shape of the mouth when air begins moving. Marked with “triangle” notehead.

Strings:

Some strings will be instructed to “bow the bridge” with an narrow) “box” notehead. The player should move the bow diagonally across the top of the bridge (with the frog moving toward the shoulder of the bow arm), while muting the strings with the left hand to avoid string sound.

Percussion:

In movement two, “percussionist #2” will play with whistle throughout the piece, he/she can keep the whistle in their mouth throughout the movement (so that they can play the whistle and other things at the same time). If they choose to do this, then they can refrain from speaking.

In movement 2, measure 45, both percussionists play snare in the same measure. Two snare drums can be used, or the players be aware of each other and plan ahead to let each other play when they need to.

(n)Obsequy

The image displays a page from a musical score, likely for a symphony orchestra. The score is written for various instruments, including woodwinds, brass, strings, and percussion. The notation includes notes, rests, and dynamic markings such as p (piano), mp (mezzo-piano), pp (pianissimo), and ppp (pianississimo). There are also articulation marks like accents and slurs. Performance instructions are provided for some instruments, such as "blow air through instrument without full embouchure (begin air as if saying 'to')". The score is divided into two main sections, A and B, indicated by brackets at the top. The key signature is one sharp (F#), and the time signature is 3/4. The page number 10 is visible in the top right corner.
